Introduction

This guide is designed to give sentencers an overview of the programmes and services available to offenders in Warwickshire and West Mercia.

It covers the range of requirements available to offenders under the new Offender Rehabilitation Act 2014 (ORA).

The changes will only apply to offences committed after the relevant provisions in the act are commenced (those offences committed on or after 1 February 2015).

The guide covers the specified activities available to offenders not sentenced under ORA as well as a range of other services that are available to offenders that are not specified activities but add value.

What is a RAR?

The court will decide whether it is appropriate to impose this requirement and the maximum number of days the offender can be directed to take part in activities.

A responsible officer will then be able to direct offenders to attend appointments with them and to participate in activities with a view to promoting the offender's rehabilitation.

The responsible officer will decide where the offender should attend appointments, what the activities are, who the offender should report to and where the activities will take place.

The instructions to participate in activities must be given 'with a view to promoting the offender's rehabilitation', but that does not prevent them serving other purposes, such as reparation, including restorative justice activities.

If the offender unreasonably fails to engage they will be in breach of their order.

'I have used positive self-talk to help me cope with my childhood memories and this has helped me deal with my drug and alcohol misuse'
